HISTORY OF THE POINSETTIA

In 1810, Joel R. Poinsett was appointed the first American diplomat to Argentina and Chile; he wrote a constitution for Chile, using the U.S. Constitution as a model. He returned to the U.S. in January 1816, was elected to the South Carolina state legislature; he was elected to the U.S. House of Representatives in 1821, on the Foreign Affairs Committee. In March 1825 he resigned from Congress to be the first American ambassador to Mexico, to acquire Texas and convince Mexico to redraw the borderline farther south, which he was unable to do; he returned to Charleston in 1828 and remained politically active. Interested in science and art, he was involved in creating the National Institute for the Promotion of Science, forerunner of the Smithsonian Institution, and became its first president. On his return from Mexico, Poinsett brought back plants of a bright red flower known in Mexico as the Nochebuena, the flower of Christmas Eve. We know it as the poinsettia, named in honor of the man who brought it to America.
